Abstract

This is a paper concerning the psychotherapeutic process of a patient (T), a 13 year-old boy who presents an attack of unconsciousness. In this case, the problem is the relationship between T and his father, the relationship between his parents, and his father's psychological absence in his family. In the psychotherapeutic process, T's change paralleled the change of relationship in his family members, especially the fact that the family became to value the father's existence.
